INTRODUCTION

In recent years journalists, politicians, and scholars of history, political science, and sociology have all come to an increased awareness of the value of election statistics for comparisons across political units and time. Election data put to new uses through more sophisticated analyses have made possible research that was heretofore largely within the realm of the intelligent guess. As the use of the electronic computer becomes more and more a tool of social research, it seems fair to say that election data will yield even more fruitful results. The present data, for example, could be programmed to yield interesting sidelights on trends, etc. that are otherwise available only through laborious effort. But the systematic collection of election results has come about for other reasons as well. They provide a slice of the history of the political units from which they are collected. Much more is known, for example, than simply who won; now we can tell better the where, when, and how much of the story. Also, election data has not been an object of preservation in many areas of the country. Compiling the data not only makes it possible to analyze them today, but ensures that they will be available for analysis in the future.

This collection of general election data in the State of Arizona from 1911 through 1960 has been brought together for analysis and historical purposes. It does not exist in as convenient form anywhere else. The State Librarian has compiled election data in looseleaf fashion and the office of the Secretary of State has all of the data, but in neither instance are these figures generally available to the average citizen of Arizona without a visit to one of the offices.

Moreover, in neither place has the data been computed on a percentage basis as in this publication.

The information in this publication is largely self-explanatory. Data has been put together by office, beginning with the election of 1911 and ending with the most recent election for each office - which means in most cases the year 1960. Preceding the data for each office there are summary sheets that list the candidates by parties, including the minor parties. On the data sheets, the minor parties have been lumped together under the title "Other." By and large this causes no problem; the "Other" column is significant mostly in 1912, when former President Theodore Roosevelt ran on the Progressive ticket. In addition to the summary sheets at the beginning of the data collection for each office, one more summary sheet has been added at the beginning of this publication; this sheet shows by office and election the winning party in each campaign from 1911 to 1960.

The data were collected from two places principally; from the State Library and Archives and from the Secretary of State's office. In some few instances the number of votes listed for candidates were in conflict with each other. In so far as possible, conflicts were examined and resolved by resort to third party evidence. Such errors as remain stem from the fact that it is impossible to have one hundred percent certainty in some instances. After collection, the data was key punched by the General Electric Computer Lab at Arizona State University and printed on their printer from a magnetic tape.

Such a publication, then, owes its existence to the help of a lot of people. The author wishes to thank Alice B. Good, Director, State Library and Archives, and the Secretary of State's office for providing most of the data; to thank Miss

Lou Ann Caton and Miss Carol Dandy for helping in the collection of the data; to thank Mr. Ed McCauley and the General Electric Computer Lab for processing the data; and to thank Mr. Bruce Benson and the Bureau of Publications of Arizona State University for assisting in getting the information put in its final form.
